Withers' Paul Sczudlo, who is based in the firm's Los Angeles office and advises on cross-border tax planning, will present at the upcoming US-UK Tax Planning Conference in New York on May 2 and Los Angeles on May 6.

Paul will join a panel of speakers discussing issues related to international sports persons and entertainers operating in the US and UK, including tax, immigration planning, and reputation risk topics.

With offices in London, Cambridge and across seven locations in the US as well as other global offices, Withers is a go-to law firm for private client legal services for individuals, families and businesses with US-UK interests. Our attorneys work with a wide range of clients in the US and around the world, including athletes, artists, entrepreneurs and their agents and advisors, and advise clients with interests in more than 100 countries.

The US-UK Tax Planning Conference, attended by advisors of US clients with transatlantic interests, features an international panel that will discuss key developments regarding US-UK tax planning for US citizens. The conference has been running in London since 2014 and first came to New York in 2018. This will be the first year it runs in Los Angeles.
