christina.morton@withersworldwide.com

Christina is a professional support lawyer in the employment team.

She has over 20 years' experience as a solicitor advising organisations and individuals on employment and discrimination law, with a particular emphasis on charities and not-for-profit organisations.

She left partnership in a private practice when her children were small and has since worked principally as a professional support lawyer providing technical know-how, training and commentary on employment law for colleagues and clients and knowledge management services within the firm. She also works directly with a number of the firm's clients, particularly on new legal developments and acts as a sounding board to colleagues on a wide range of client matters.

Since 2010 Christina has sat as an employment judge assigned to the London South region. She is also an ADR Group Accredited Civil and Commercial Mediator.
